Your written comments are an important part of your course and instructor evaluation. Please provide feedback in the box below on aspects of the course and/or the instructor that were most effective or need improvement. Student comments will be provided to your instructor only after course grades have been submitted. The instructor may, but is not obligated to, share these comments with others or include them in any evaluation process.

- I had an amazing experience and enjoyed the class a great deal.

- It is rather difficult to rate and evaluate this course and its instruction thoroughly and effectively due to its unique quality and dual teaching. The nature of the material, standing on its own, is ambiguous and when introducing this material in a fast paced setting for a 2 week course overseas (for the first time) - hiccups should be expected. I feel Dr. Hofferberth is an expert in the realm of Globalization and that he succeeded (with his co-professor) in broadening the minds of most of the U.S. and German students in the class-- if not creating an rip that allows one to look inside and question any prior preconceived notions of how the world is or isn't working together. With that said, I do believe there was room for improvement. Based off the class dynamic--the setting, time frame, etc.--it was difficult to gain the full scope of all that could be offered. The ambiguity of the material requires deeper reflection and more time to navigate and study in order to provide a clearer picture of the material. Regardless of this, some (not all) students will eventually be able to grasp the material. Dr. Hofferberth provided us with numerous resources for us to use to investigate the phenomena and research beyond the classroom environment. I feel that is sufficient for myself in order to continue studying and finding answers on my own. It would have been nice to reflect on the matters deeper in class, with the instructor, and with the other students. I feel the class would have benefited with less extracurricular activities and that time could have been used for informal discussion. The set up of participation and groups was useful but I also feel less debate and more conversation would be necessary. This was an introduction class. Many of the U.S. and German students (including myself) had examined the material and came in with our own preconceived notions of Globalization and the instructors opened the gate to question these notions, but by having us participate in debate it placed us in a scenario to take a stance where I feel the whole point was to realize that we must know more before we can take a stance. It created insecurity and confusion for many students and they searched for a blame. But the blame should not be placed on the instructors or the classroom setting - but on the students themselves. I feel more clarity in the material is required beyond what 2 weeks can provide. With that said, I feel that Dr. Hofferberth did a better job than most professors would have been able to do and I hope that he will continue to want to teach this class. He has a lot to offer students and while I feel that I did not take away all that he had to offer in this particular situation, I am grateful to have the texts he has studied to help me along.

- Loved the intercultural element. Wish there had been more activities to highlight it. Would have preferred several small papers/projects to substitute for 1 or 2 of the 2 large papers and test.

- Professor Hofferberth was an exceptional class instructor. He is very knowledgeable and offers many diverse perspectives on globalization. However, my opinion of him outside of the class room differs. We encountered a problem during our time in Germany. Specifically the area in which our hotel was located did not appear to be a very safe one. There was actually a robbery during our time there. That was the deciding factor for us to move out. Some of us felt Professor Hofferberth dealt with the issue in a passive-aggressive manner. At first he would invite us to voice opinions but would quickly dismiss them by stating his own reasons on why he thought we were feeling uncomfortable. He mentioned culture shock as one of them. A second issue i personally had with the class was the final exam. At first it was supposed to be a multiple choice test, but during the course he suddenly changed it into a multiple choice, single choice, and open answer exam. This is upsetting because the syllabus is a crucial factor when choosing classes. Lastly, a few questions on the test did not seem to be specific enough. All this aside, i can sincerely say i gained valuable knowledge on the topic of globalization. I could easily see Professor Hofferberth truly enjoys teaching. I would recommend this to anyone, but future students would likely appreciate if the syllabus is more concrete and the hoStel situated in a different area.

- This professor did not create a good learning environment. Many american and german students commented about how he made them feel inadequate. None of us felt able to truly learn with a professor who rolled his eyes or seemed to try and fight the students on their opinions.
